

Racquet Sports Aids for Arm Amputees

Ranging from tennis and badminton to squash and paddleball, racquet sports offer a number of activities for many amputees to enjoy. Devices like the ones featured here are often designed when an amputee visits a prosthetist and expresses a desire to participate in a certain activity. As there are a number of racquet sports to take part in, together they will design something that works!

Although these three devices are different designs, they all perform the same task to allow the amputee to hold a tennis ball and throw it up for serving.

A device such as this table tennis paddle holder is designed to attach to a standard socket.
